

Bond Street Hall
100 N. Bond Street
Bel Air
Private

This modest building is very significant in the history of Bel Air's black community. Most of Bel Air's 19th century black citizens were persons of modest means although some of them managed to own their own homes either on Alice Anne Street or in the Hays addition. In 1894 they followed their white neighbors' example and formed a co-operative building association. These building associations were the ancestors of the modern permanent Building and Loan Associations; they were formed to give mortgage loans in a day when commercial banks did not give such loans. This association, the only black one that appears in the documents, joined together calling themselves "The Builders", and built the Bond Street Hall. There was a store on the first floor; the second story held a meeting hall.

This two story three bay store front and social hall is at 100 N. Bond Street in the Town of Bel Air, Harford County, Maryland. Its gable roof has a false front on the east side. The windows are 2/2 double-hung sash except for the 2 six pane show windows in the first story front (east). The entrance is between the show windows. It is a six pane over three panel door. A shed roof porch on plain square posts shades the first floor front (east). The sides and back are two bay. A wood tongue and groove door is in the west corner of the south elevation. A matching door is just north of center in the rear (west) elevation.

The building is sided in asphalt.

The first floor is occupied by a barber shop open on weekends. The second floor is a social hall.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This small story front on the corner of AliceAnne and Bond has a significance for Bel Air's black community out of all proportion to its size or architectural elegance. According to the Harford Democrat for May 11, 1894, "A company of colored people calling themselves "The Builders" have bought a lot 100' x 150' at the corner of Bond and AliceAnne Streets from Mrs. Alice Richardson. They are building a two story frame building 20' x 40', the lower story for a store and the upper story as a public hall for the Society and other purposes. James Dunnigan is doing the stone work and Edward Lingan the carpentering." The black community was accustomed to having to put its nickles and dimes together in joint efforts in religion and education. This is the first effort at social organization recorded in the white press. If "The Builders" was meant to be a mutual building association like the ones their white neighbors organized after the Civil War, this is the only project I have seen in the records. The owner of record was the Morgan Business Company which bought lot #43 in Richardson's Addition from Mrs. Alice A. Richardson in 1894 (80/405). Money must have been scarce, for in 1899 the company mortgaged the property to Ora Howard and William Morgan for $600. When the company defaulted on the mortgage, Mrs. Howard and Mr. Morgan bought it in for $1100 (1904, 113/186). In 1904 there was a grocery store in the building. In 1909 Mrs. Howard bought Morgan's share for $500 (125/349). After Ora Howard's husband James died, she married John F. Whittington. After she died Whittington sued her executor, Andrew Whittington (equity 139/414). The result was the sale of the property which by then included a two story L-shaped house on Bond Street next to the hall and a small one story house behind the hall on AliceAnne Street. Andrew Whittington bought the property for $1650 (239/151). He lives in the Bond Street house. There is a barber shop on the ground floor of the hall today.
